Artistic Director's Note

How wonderful it is to be here with you for Reflections of The Winter Sun! There are many seemingly obvious themes with the winter solstice that can be connected to our current times: more light, longer days, hope, and renewal. When reflecting on these themes, I noticed that the thread that ties these together is unexpected opportunity. At first glance, creating a dance with many restrictions can appear impossible. Many of a choreographer's usual tools and ideas aren't available. However, restriction creates uncanny opportunities to see things in a new way and to experiment with new ideas. I liken this to being in a tight place while rock climbing. Tight spaces appear to offer little freedom, yet they offer support and leverage in unexpected ways to reach new heights. While these dances started with being in a literal box, it is fascinating how they've grown and evolved in a direction beyond their initial restrictions. The dancers too, have evolved, and I'm proud of their work and dedication to this cause by practicing at home, rehearsing over video calls, and extending their grace beyond their movement.

This performance would not be possible without the support, cohesion, and community effort of everyone involved: our dedicated dancers and families, our wonderful faculty and choreographers, our devoted KTB Board, our selfless volunteers, and our supportive audience. Thank you for your part in making this experience possible.

Wishing you light, joy, and a wonderful holiday season!

Jesse Campbell
